Masaki Terabe, PhD, is an investigator (principal investigator) at the Neuro-Oncology Branch, National Cancer Institute (NCI), National Institutes of Health (NIH), and is an expert in natural killer T cell biology and cancer immunology. He received his doctorate from the University of Tokyo in 1999 and then completed postdoctoral training at the NCI. Dr. Terabe moved to his current position with the NIH in 2019. His current research focuses on the functions of unconventional T cells in primary brain cancer. He has 100 publications in peer-reviewed scientific journals.